

Blue dragon flies. Many dancing, swooping, interacting in two's largely, a few in three's—sometimes clipping each other, often quite in concert. Green head, blue body, Black tip on tail. Orange on wings and black dots:

One dragon fly hovers, repeatedly dips its tail in the water.

As I attend more, they come in greater number, closer and oftener. Do they come because I'm curious or is it my eyes/head, bobbing, following them, imitating their moves? I think they sense my interest.

Kingfisher hitting the water. Whap.
